“Love Dot Com: The Social Experiment” releases to public audiences Nov. 19

Tobias Truvillion and Brave Williams star in a romantic comedy exploring modern love

Richmond, VA (Nov. 18, 2019) – Soulidify Productions, a film company with a mission to produce meaningful, uplifting stories that are entertaining and beautifully told, has partnered with Gravitas Ventures to release Love Dot Com: The Social Experiment to audiences worldwide through Video-on-Demand (VOD) on all platforms (soulidify.com/lovedotcom) and Blu-ray starting Nov. 19, 2019.

The film stars Tobias Truvillion (“Brooklyn’s Finest,” “One Life To Live,” “Hitch”) and Brave Williams (“The Start Up,” “Crazy, Sexy, Cool,” “R&B Divas LA,” “Bad Dad Rehab”) with LisaRaye McCoy (“All of Us,” “Envy,” “Civil Brand”), Charles Malik Whitfield (“The Temptations”), Kym Whitley (“Rango,” “Fist Fight”) and R&B singer Raheem DeVaughn (“The Love Reunion,” “Decade of a Love King”).

Filmed in bustling Washington, D.C., Love Dot Com: The Social Experiment is a 21st century, grown-up romantic comedy that navigates the difficulties of modern romance. Shelby Quinn (Brave Williams) is a social justice food warrior working to uplift her gentrifying community. Anything she puts her mind to gets done and she never waivers on what she believes is right. Greg Jeffries (Tobias Truvillion) is handsome, successful and happy with the life he has built for himself. He is a sought-after land developer who is helping to shape the city he grew up in. Greg believes in progress at all costs.

What seems like a happy accident in the grocery store leads to a perfect “opposites attract” relationship that runs into issues of unfinished business and different priorities. With hilariously terrible advice from friends and self-doubt driving almost every decision, this complicated love story takes our hearts through the twists and turns of modern love and self-realization while exploring how community and corporate need to work together.

Love Dot Com: The Social Experiment was written and directed by Charneice Fox and produced by Soulidify Productions and Straight No Chaser Media.

“The film could be anyone’s love story who is dating today,” says BK Fulton, Chairman and CEO of Soulidify Productions. “It’s a funny ‘girl meets boy in the real world’ story, but she needs validation from an app – ‘Love Dot Com’ – in the cyberworld to be sure they are a match. Should they trust the computer or trust what they feel?”

Love Dot Com: The Social Experiment premiered earlier this year at the 23rd Annual American Black Film Festival (ABFF), where it screened in Miami from June 12-16 at the Regal Cinemas South Beach. It later appeared as the opening feature at the inaugural Goel Film Festival, held at Phillips Exeter Academy, on October 4.
